Edited by Linda Storr'sI've been thinking a lot lately about how to get me into Python and how to get me motivated as a software engineer. When I was in grad school and wanted to try to write my PhD thesis (I didn't actually commit to it at the time), my professors (who had just come back from a conference) made it a point to ask me questions such as how long it takes for people who do software engineering to finish. In general, they seem to think that it takes forever to do a PhD, but they didn't really talk to me about the statistics of it. And they don't seem to have much confidence in saying that it takes longer to write software due to lack of experience..
